Before moving to Phoenix in 1992, she taught 2 years in the Art and Design Department at the University of Wisconsin-Stout. For the past 35 years she has conducted classes and workshops in Wisconsin, Arizona, Minnesota, and New Mexico.

Her exceptional versatility of subjects; use of bold, bright color; and mature sense of design impress and fascinate the viewer. Her award-winning paintings have been in numerous shows and galleries including American Artist, The Artist's, Phoenix Home and Garden, and Cowboys & Indians magazines. Room Art and Public Space Art are among the many commercial interior design projects that she has completed. She is represented by Rogoway Gallery in Tubac, AZ., Turquoise Tortoise Gallery in Sedona, AZ., and Simon Gallery of Fine Art, Tucson, AZ., and is a juried member of the Sonoran Arts League and Arizona Art Alliance.

In 2011, after 20 years in Phoenix, she moved to Stillwater and opened her Studio/Gallery, where she teaches classes in drawing, painting and color theory. Weiser believes that anyone can paint. Her passion to inspire that talent creates a supportive, positive experience in the classroom where all students can achieve the joy of painting.

Artist Statement

My approach to painting is like detective work. Analyzing, investigating, and digging for information, asking why, what, where and how. That is how my composition, subject, and color decisions are made. I mostly work from my own photos. This allows me time to crop, replace, reposition, or enlarge the forms. I spend a lot of time developing my compositions and cannot conceive of chasing those pesky little shadows on the run, which plein air painters do.

No matter what the subject (I paint many), my focus is consistent. I paint the light that falls over form, not the named subject. When an object is lit with just the right amount and direction of light so that a strong value pattern is established, I get excited. When I find that situation or compose it, the pull to put it on canvas is very urgent.

My process of painting is developing strong value patterns, creating unique compositions, using bold colors, meticulous attention to detail, and concentrating on technical proficiency.

ART? It's the "fix" I need. It satisfies my physical craving to paint, the intellectual challenge of design/composition, and best of all, my spirit.
