About the Artist

Beth's Nature in Art and Imagined Vignettes are mixed media designs that combine less traditional materials with acrylics to create unique works of art. Her technique was developed many years ago while designing cabinet doors and has continued to evolve through life experience.

Some of Beth's favorite comments she has received when showing her work is that her art is refreshingly different and unique. Many people also love the colors and subject matter.

Artist Statement

"When I am drawing my designs, I create vignettes of imagined scenarios in nature, building a bit of a story as my art evolves. When I create water in a piece I hear it lapping the shore line or sloshing against a log that I find soothing. When building texture I'm taken back to time in the sand box with my sons. Being a big fan of hand stitching and embroidery, I have done a fair amount of it so I tend to add my version of a stitch mark in my art. I have found working on my art and listening to audio books is the perfect creative environment."
