About the Artist

Growing up in the middle of North Dakota and the daughter of farmers, the land was open, large, and full of big skies. The flow of seasons brought unique colors and cloud patterns, and it was a smart idea to pay attention to the details of nature and weather patterns.

Moving to Minnesota in my early 20's opened my eyes to the joy of forested lands, thousands of lakes, and big rivers. I've had the opportunity to travel the US and internationally, enjoying the commonality of nature as well as the unique shapes, lines, textures and colors that can be found sometimes, only "there".

About the Art

I paint landscapes that intrigue me and make me want to shout "look at that!"—with a goal to recreate and share the experience of that place. Painting in a large format invites the viewer to visually and mentally step into them, stay awhile, and absorb the details nature provides.

Several years ago I discovered the word "Coddiwomple" (v), to travel in a purposeful manner towards a vague destination." I invite you all to pause and travel with me!

Finally, and so importantly, I hope my work inspires an increased appreciation of our earth; a desire to protect it; and a call to action to participate in some way to preserve it for future generations. Think green!
